J.M. Coull announced today that it has begun construction on the Toyota Boston-Region Training Center renovation and expansion in Mansfield, Mass. This project, currently in the second of three phases, consists of a 6,500-square-foot expansion, a 1,000-square-foot renovation to the existing training center where automobile mechanics are trained to maintain and repair Toyota vehicles, and extensive site improvements to approximately 27 acres in preparation for the new building and 200 new parking spaces. The expansion of Toyota's training center is situated adjacent to a 200,000-square-foot parts distribution center that must remain open throughout construction.
